Dear Family,

I hope this letter finds you well. I want to take a moment to address something important and personal. It's not easy for me to share this, but I believe it's essential to be open and honest with you all.

Recently, I was convicted of a felony. This has been a significant turning point in my life, and I want to explain what happened and how I am coping with the situation.

[Insert a brief explanation of the circumstances leading to the conviction, being honest and forthright, but also mindful of your family's feelings.]

I understand that this news may be difficult for you to hear and may cause concern or disappointment. I take full responsibility for my actions and am committed to making amends and learning from this experience.

While it may not change the past, I am working hard to improve myself moving forward. I am [mention your plans for rehabilitation, personal growth, or how you intend to work on rebuilding your life].

I value your support and love during this time, and I hope we can navigate this together. I am here to answer any questions you may have and to help you understand my situation better.

Thank you for your understanding. I appreciate each of you immensely.

With love,
